Tri-National Conference on the Labour Dimensions of Corporate Social Responsibility in North America

On March 30-31, 2005, the Labour Program of Human Resources and Skills Development Canada, in collaboration with the United States Department of Labor and the Mexican Secretariat of Labour and Social Welfare will host a two-day Tri-National Conference on the Labour Dimensions of Corporate Social Responsibility in North America at the Government Conference Centre in Ottawa, Canada.

This conference, organized as part of the Cooperative Activities Program under the North American Agreement on Labour Cooperation, will bring together a cross-section of labour and business leaders, government officials, non-governmental organizations and academic experts from Canada, Mexico and the United States to explore the benefits and challenges of labour related corporate social responsibility initiatives in North America. The conference is open to the general public and will provide extensive opportunity for discussion and audience participation.
